

WPCC will crown its 'sexiest turkey or hen'

Western Piedmont Community College students crown their "sexiest turkey or hen" Thursday night in an annual college event.

The "Turkey Tip Off" at the Collett Street Recreation Center raises funds for scholarships at the college. Sponsored by the college's Phi Theta Kappa honor society, the event raised funds for scholarships last year for a student from Freedom, East Burke and McDowell high schools.

This year's crowning of a WPCC faculty or staff member as the college turkey will be at halftime of a student-faculty basketball game, which begins at 7:30 p.m. Each member of the student society has been raising funds for his or her favorite faculty or staff member. The member receiving the most "votes" through donations will be the champion.

Students have been raising money through bake sales, plate lunches, car washes and even a rummage sale for the event.

Also during halftime activities a slam dunk contest will be held. Anyone is eligible to participate.

The WPCC basketball team will kick off the activities with its first public intra-squad scrimmage at 6:30 p.m.

Last year's college "turkey" was George Fouts, who is the college's acting vice president for academic affairs.