

Golf tournament planned

About 128 players are expected to participate in Western Piedmont Community College's second annual Patron's Golf Tournament at Mimosa Hills Golf and Country Club Monday.

The sponsors of the tournament, the WPCC Foundation, was created in 1967 to encourage public and private support to ensure quality offerings by the college.

A special golf committee was set up to organize this year's event. The committee, headed by Frank Bowers, consists of: George Andrea, George Davis, Frank Patton, Anne Wright, Murray Small, Tim Smith, Adellah Isenhower, J.H. McCombs, Jr., Tom Pope, Roy Greenwood and staff members from WPCC.

In addition to the golf tournament is a social hour and dinner at the golf club.

Canoeing classes

The Physical Education Department will offer a series of canoeing classes beginning this spring and continuing through the summer.

The first class will be held at Lake James May 3, 4 and 5. Other classes will be Basic River Canoeing, Basic Solo Canoeing and Intermediate Solo Canoeing. Anyone interested in the classes should contact Bob Benner at the college at 437-8688.

Musicians entertain

A duo of WPCC musicians will entertain Parents Aides Lending Support, PALS, a Catawba County United Way Agency, Thursday at 7 p.m.

Performing the music will be Louise White, coordinator of writing and music appreciation instructor at WPCC. She will be accompanied on the guitar by student Pat Harton.

Dedicated to the PALS volunteers who assist troubled families, the musical program will center around the relationship between parents and children.

Technical support will be provided by Buddy Noles, audio visual coordinator, and student Pam Walker.

News notes
from Western Piedmont

Tourney tees off

Frank Bowers, 1985 WPCC Patron's Golf Tournament co-chairman, tees off for a practice round while George Fouts (left), WPCC executive vice president, and George Davis (center), tournament co-chairman, wait their turn at Mimosa Hills Golf and Country Club. Sponsored by the WPCC Foundation, the tournament will be held Monday, and interested golfers are invited to enter.

