WPCC holds groundbreaking

Western Piedmont Community College held a groundbreaking ceremony Wednesday for the new Breeden Engineering Technology Center. Shown here with the shovels are Tom and Frances Breeden. The center was named for the Breedens in honor of their many contributions to the college including the largest gift from a single donor to the center's fundraising campaign. Also shown are (not in order) WPCC President Jim Richardson; Fred J. Whalen, chairman of the WPCC Board of Trustees; Otto Woerner, Western Piedmont Foundation board member and co-chairman of the technology center campaign committee; John Watkins, Foundation board member and campaign committee member; Lou Lovelace, president of the Foundation and co-chairman of the campaign committee; and Rondal Mull, Foundation director and campaign committee member.
