

AT WORK IN NEW HOME—Western Piedmont Community College faculty members and students got to work today, the first day of the spring quarter, on the new campus. Here James Cates conducts a typing class in B Building. There are approximately 725 students currently enrolled and right now the college is in a pleasant state of confusion. Dean J. Paul Bagley, of student personnel services, commented that

"Moving is complete but the finding is something else. We know we got here with it, but where did we put it. It's a pleasant sort of frustration." He said the college expects when things are straightened up to hold an open house when Burke County can be shown something very pleasant. (Staff photo by Benny Orders) 3-26-68
